Gowns of Black Velvet Reflect The Latest Ideas from Paris

THE Gown pictured first is accented with white ermine in a manner distinctly Parisian; its long tight sleeves and odd Jenny neckline, too, are notably "imported." $125. Other black velvet Dresses for afternoon and evening from $67.50 up.

There's a Bengaline Frock with Scarlet

Every French model, if it is navy blue, must have its flash of scarlet. This one has red embroidered bands and a red motif at the side. Note the Premet handkerchief cuffs and collar. $125.

Our Selection of Woolen Fabrics Is Superbly Complete and Varied

THIS fall promises to surpass many seasons in the new Woolen fabrics it I offers, not only in the striking types of weaves, but in their amazing variety. The new dull finishes, so much used now for coats and the "costume ensemble," the plaids and broad flannels for sports, the finer twills and charmeens for frocks, as well as the fashionable bengalines—all are fully represented. Colors, too, are here—the reds and browns, greens, blues, navy and black.

Among the Weaves for Frocks and Coats

Charmeen is, of course, very important. In brown, green, black, and new variations of these, 54 inches wide, $7 the yard. Ottoman Bengaline—silk and wool combined—comes in rust, blue, artichoke, black, brown, 40 inches wide, $5 and $6.50. Plaids are unusually smart, both checks and stripes, foreign and domestic, $4.75 to $7.50. For Coats or Costume Ensembles, veloria, kashmir kermana, charmella, fawnskin in wanted shades, are favored, $7.50 to $14.50. Woolen Fabrics, Second Floor, South, State

In the French Salon Showing the Use of Ostrich

THE uneven brim, soft ostrich trimming banding the crown and falling lightly over the shoulder from under the brim, the hatter's plush foundation, the straight, not-quite-high crown combine in this Hat to interpret some of the newest millinery influences.

In this and in the Debutante Salon similarly effective models, many designed in our own workroom, are arriving daily, both tailored and more elaborate types.

Trimmings Have Never Been Lovelier or Richer in Color

SIMPLICITY of line in costumes has naturally height-ened the importance of Trimmings. And no one could ask for a more brilliant choice than ours, from a single ornament to elaborate garnishment for evening gowns. Red is, of course, prominent, because of the delight of Paris in a bit of scarlet with navy blue and black.

These Have Just Come from Abroad

Suedine bandings in colors and gold beads, colored leather motifs, ingeniously put together, ostrich and marabou in all the new shades for evening gowns, chenille and bandings—but we can't begin to name them all, or describe the truly marvelous color blends!

Introducing a Brilliant New Woolen Sports Fabric

SOMETHING new in weave and texture, and extraordinarily skillful in the use of color and design. It is rather light in weight, but firm, and is admirable for sports frocks, coats and skirts, as well as for combination with a solid material. The designs are jewel-like.

Exclusive in Our Woolen Section

The designs are new and original, and the fabrics will be found nowhere else in Chicago. The browns and greens, popular this fall, are especially attractive. Woolen Fabrics, Second Floor, South, State

THE fashion forecast for this coming winter promises that Spanish Shawls will be exceedingly effective for formal types of evening wear. For the new white gowns there may be found a corresponding vogue for white shawls embroidered in one or many colors. THOSE MEN OF DESTINY.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—In considering the standard bearers of the Republican pariy the thought has repeatedly come to me that but few of our citizens assem to fully appreciate.

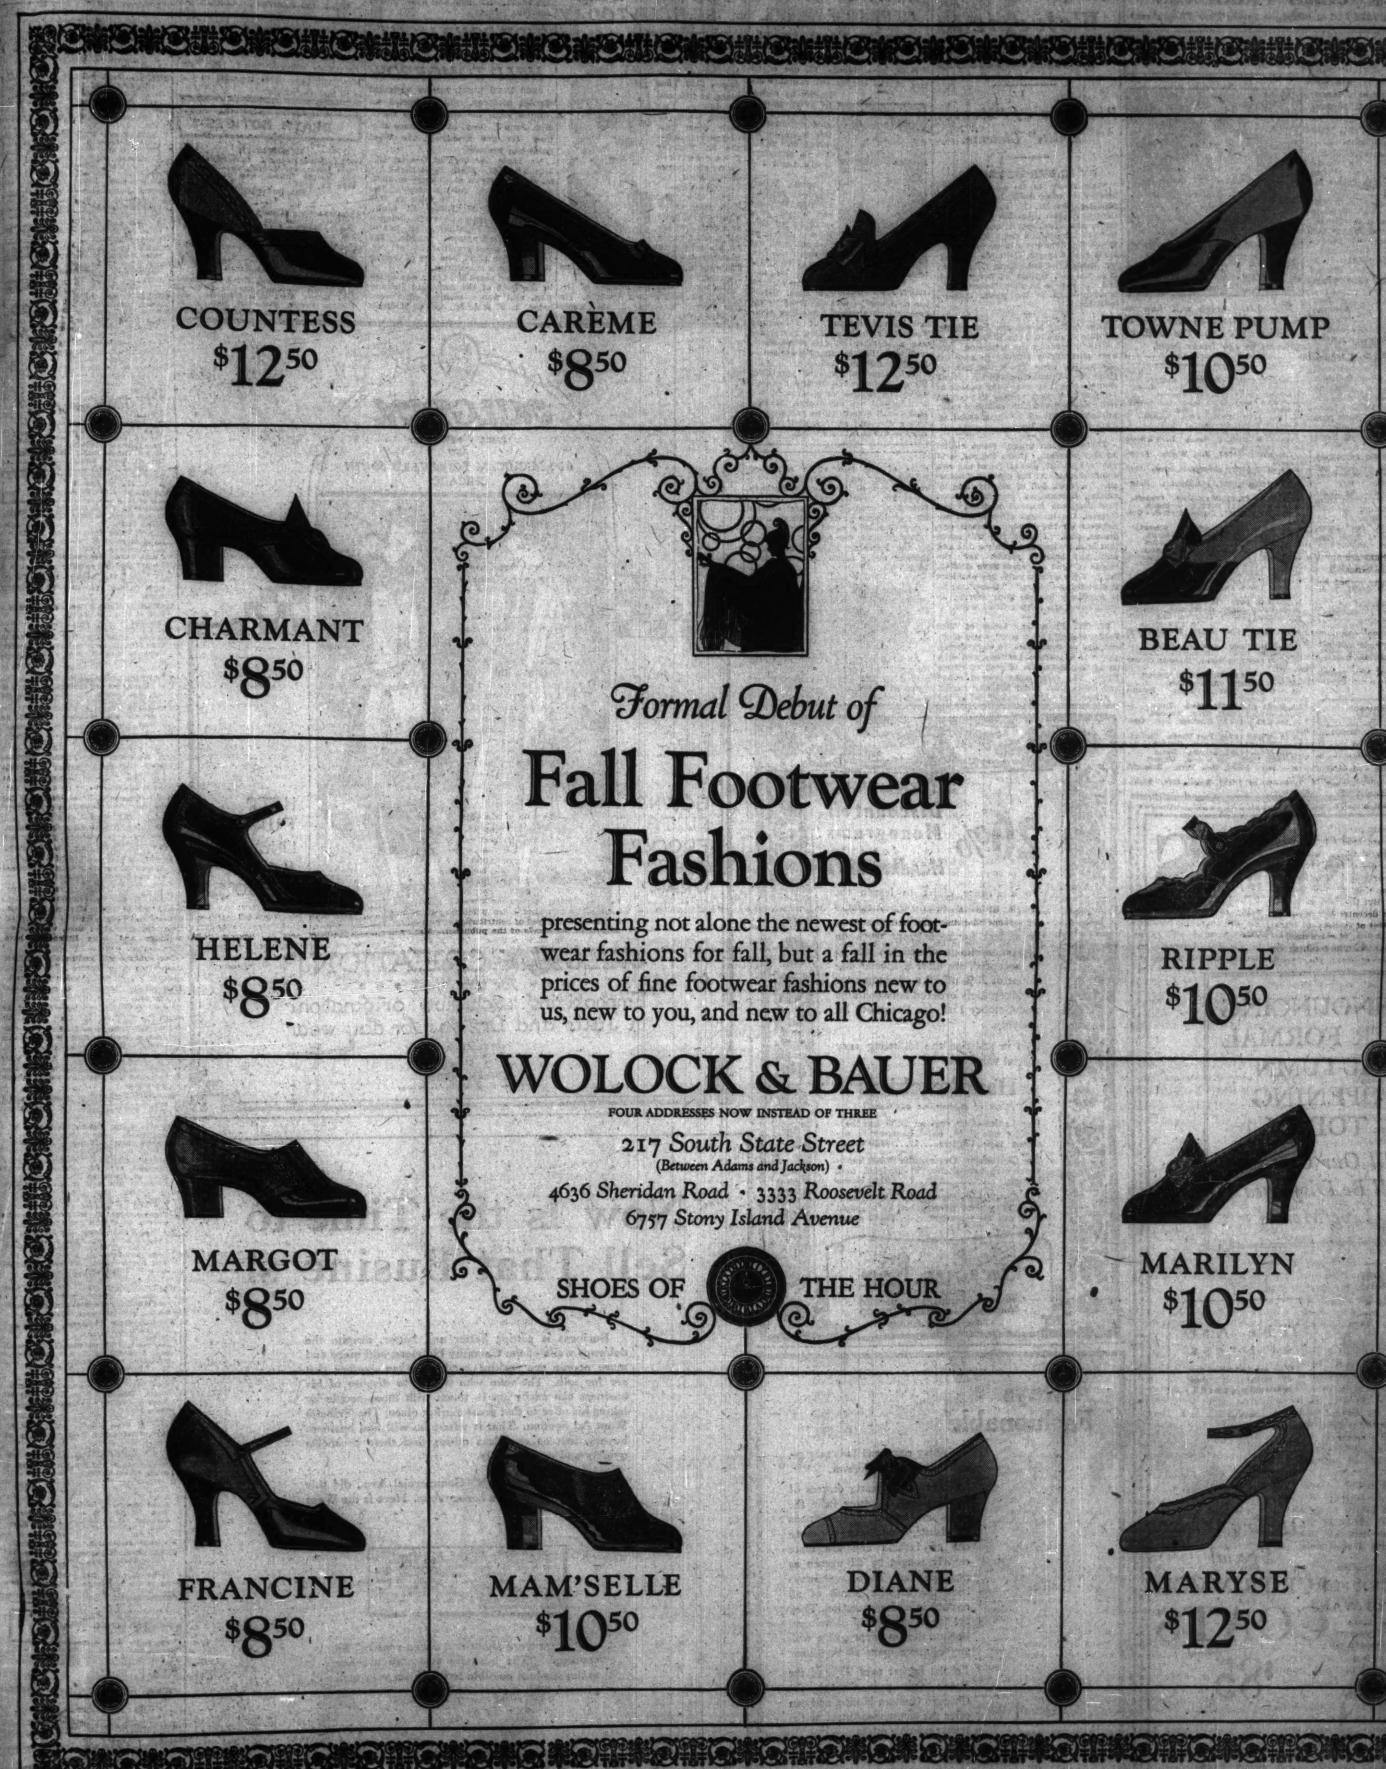

This thought has finally crystallized leself in the following sentence:

"Uncle Sam has never had up good a chance to get as good a team."

Why would it not make a real campaign alogan? It surely could be used to advantage on campaign posters and newspaper scare heads.

If you will only repeat the above to yourself a few times I am certain that it will appeal to you just as it has to me.

Want Ads Bring Buyers for Businesses

A business is not easy to sell. The field is very limited; only people interested in the kind of business that is for sale will respond to an offer. These people must have money to finance the deal, or their replies are valueless.

The broad range of Tribune circulation distributes Want Ad messages to every grade of purchaser. The response is ample, and a quick sale is therefore easy.

This Want Ad, used recently by the Madison Square Garage, 4982 Madison St., is an excellent example of

It's a Courtesy Desk

THE "Complaint Desk" in the Surface Lines offices has been rechristened.

It's the "Courtesy Desk" now.

The change was suggested by the official who reads the let-ters received daily from passengers. He found a constantly in-creasing percentage of them begin "I wish to commend——"

So, he asked, why not give the desk a cheerful name significant of the pleasant tone of most of the correspondence?

There are complaints, too, of course. It could not be other-ise in an organization of 12,000 trainmen dealing with millions

But the point is that there are more bouquets and fewer brick bats.

Surface Lines trainmen are the best paid street car men in the United States. The great majority of them have been in the service many years. It is their life work. The occasional grouch among them is as unpopular with them as with the public, and he doesn't last long.

Reports from passengers relative to service are always thankfully received. They are a direct aid to efficiency.

MAIL COUPO

2,200,000

Ten years ago the circulation of The American Magazine was 400,000 copies a month.

Five years ago it was 1,200,000 a month. Two years ago it was 1,800,000 a month. One year ago it was 2,000,000 a month.

TODAY the October issue is on the newsstands carrying the announcement, "more than 2,200,000 circulation."

There has never been such a record in the field of monthly journalism. What is the secret of it? Why should 100,000 people add themselves to this magazine's circle of friends every six months?

You will find the answer in the pages of this October issue; you will find it expressed with penetrating clearness in Irving Bacheller's remarkable human document on page 14.

That document is Irving Bacheller's creed; it is also The American Magazine's creed. He tells why he believes in people. He shows how, again and again, at critical moments in his long, successful career, people have exceeded his expectations; how their decency and friendliness have met him more than half-way; how it has paid him to believe in them.

The cynic scoffs at this philosophy. "Take care of Number One," he says. "Look out for yourself, for no one else is going to look out for you." "Do unto others what you think they are going to do unto you, and do it first."

These are the mottoes of mediocrity. Bigness is never born out of them.

The American Magazine began ten years ago to build upon the firm foundation of faith—faith in people; in the extraordinary possibilities of ordinary folks; in the supreme interest and importance of Life.

And so long as Life increases in variety and scope, such a magazine must necessarily continue to increase; for this magazine is Life.

As Good as a Visit

TUST as good as a visit is a three minute station-to-station telephone call.

Evening, and you are away. You picture mother and father in the living room at home. The glow of the light shines on mother's soft gray hair and father's glasses. Mother is darning stockings.

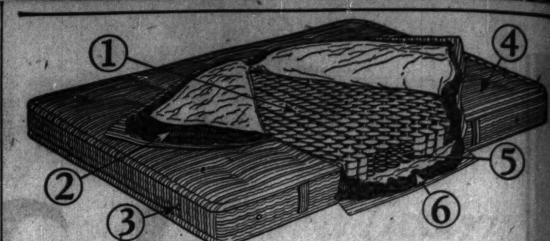

Father is reading the evening paper. At intervals he repeats some bit of news or a joke to mother. If you could only be with them for just a few minutes!

You can, and for a small sum. Go to the telephone and ask Long Distance for your home telephone number. In a few minutes you will hear mother's voice and father's greeting. Let "Long Distance" take you home for a visit.

TORE

INDECEMBER, 1922 (almost two years ago), we announced an adjustment of advertising rates necessitated by an increase of 150,000 in circulation since the previous adjustment. At that time—we said:

It is good business to buy space in a medium which is repeatedly forced to raise its rates because the advertiser during the latter half of any contract period is receiving much more circulation than was contemplated when the rate was fixed. It is as though one bought coal at $10 a ton for a year beginning in January, but found that in February the coal merchant delivered 2,100 pounds to the ton; in March, 2,200 pounds; in July, 2,400 pounds, and so on!

The truth of this statement is evidenced by the fact that thus far in 1924 the circulation of The Chicago Tribune has averaged 80,000 to 88,000 more than during the month of December, 1922. It is cheapest to contract for advertising in a paper that is steadily going ahead.

August is usually a low month for newspaper circulation, but the average net paid circulation of The Tribune on week days during August was 613,045, and on Sundays:

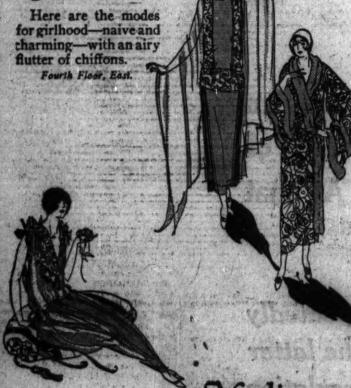

Coats

Fabric and fur and fashion are blended in perfect harmony. A soft gray fabric with panels of squirrel fur in one coat. A luxurious use of red fox and rust-color duvetyn in another-and always lines are slender. Prices vary with style, from $75 to $450.

Fourth Floor, North and South

For the rest hour are negligees of satin brocade patterned in blue and rosy silver and edged with tinted marabou.

Others veil their creamy laces with trailing chiffons caught by lovely silken flowers.

Exquisite lingerie, too, for the bride of autumn to make her choice. Third Floor, North.

Wide-brimmed hats, veiled with ostrich feathers, quaint "pokes" whose crowns are banked with silken flowers contrast with snug turbans. It's a wide-latitude the millinery mode allows this season.

Suits follow the rule of "three" to smartness, and assume the guise of tailleur or frock or both. And with fur attain all the heights and depths of mode—fur banding suits knee-deep or often making entire coats.

So suits return to fashion with a distinction which assures success. According to style, $95 to $650.

The fashions of a new season are given intro-duction here in suits, coats, frocks, hats, appar-el for youth and the accessories of dress—all chosen with a fine appreciation of mode 1924, a subtle harmony of line and garniture made vivid by rich fabrics and brilliant touches.

Trocks Highly Distinguished

All the beauty and richness of the new season seem to be summed up in evening frocks. Metal meshed laces serve as back-ground for gorgeous flower patterns on one frock. Velvet bro-cade in copper tones and strands of bronzed beads make another.

Steel beaded gray chiffon melts its tones into soft gray fur in a frock for afternoons. For the street, frocks of silks and bengalines whose simplicity is relieved by touches of white or crimson. Prices vary with style, $75 to $450.

New Tabrics

Fashion tests her metal in fabrics by weaving them over in sparkling motifs of glinting threads on supple silks and chiffons. Bengalines are new to the mode, satins and crepes as much in favor.

Wool fabrics take on a smooth and suede-like surface which reflects perfectly the depth and beauty of fall colors. And wool repps and flannels are especially smart. Second Floor, North

Jurs

Supple as fabrics, so that the silhouette, even as it concerns furs, is straight and slender.

A coat of summer ermine is banded in fox. American broadtail proves its smartness in a coat whose skirt is tiered. Caracul, silkily soft, finds contrast in full bands of fox fur.

Fourth Floor, East.

"French" in the inimitable slender grace of line, exquisite fabrics and unusual touches are these supple corsets of silk brocade in deep apri-cot shade with sections of elastic at $50. Other French corsets are $25 to $50.

Footwear keeps pace with fashion in graceful pumps of silver brocaded cloth for evening smart strapped slippers for tailored modes. Prices, $13.50 to $17.50 pair. Third Floor, South.

Blouses

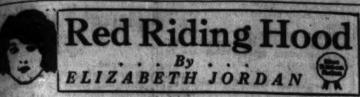

The blouse in its evo-lution stops just short or becoming a frock, for it is knee length, or longer, and straight. So with elaborate versions a suit is transformed into a dinner frock.

Patterns of beads or embroideries emphasize the brilliance of colorful fabrics. $8.50 to $40, according to kind.

She inferred that baiting Mrs. Schuyler was the pet diversion of Jim and Saily, and an unexpected sympathy for her employer welled up in her. An emphatic am of the front door proved that some one had left the apartment, probably its mistress. The new maid, or secretary—she wondered whimsically which she was settled down contentedly to a morning's work with the mail, interrupted, as it developed, by several down telephone calls and a fairly study ringing of the front door bell.

The hall man seemed constantly bringing mail. there were three morning deliveries of letters and two of newspapers and circuars. The personal purchases made by members of the family were also delly sed at the front door, and apparently the two women had already begun their sliday shopping. Thus spoke Mrs. Schuyler at the luncheon table that noon, and thus simply was Miss Emerson's new position in the household defined.

In her heart the girl was rather relieved. She had not objected to being a maid. Her immediate necessity was work, and it was not for her to cavil at the special aspects it presented. Moreover, she felt, with entire conviction,

"I've paid this month for a dozen tickets for charity affairs alone," Mrs. huyler grumbled, "tickets you held on to so long that they couldn't be remed. True, she had offered to help with the but not to any such degree as was unfolding; and her originally defined would have filled, her time. She needed help. I went for old-time's sake. I avoided kissing her, thinking only of my great, pure love for another.
